END PLASTIC WASTE

Plastic is the problem. Innovation is the solution.
We're rethinking and repurposing plastic.

TACKLING PLASTIC

Over 5 trillion pieces of plastic litter our oceans. And every minute, one truckload of plastic ends up in our oceans. By 2050 there may be more plastic in our oceans than fish. Plastic does not bio-degrade like natural materials; it breaks down into even smaller pieces, which animals mistake for food. If the sea life is consuming it, then we are too. It's not too late to turn this around.

Recycling is the first step in breaking the cycle, but we need to rethink and reinvent to eventually eliminate plastic. It's time to shift our attitudes, our perspectives and our habits. We must find ways to synchronise the economic system of humankind with the ecosystem of nature. Let's do it together.

THE FUTURE STARTS TODAY

We're working to save our oceans, for us and generations to come. That's why we're using recycled materials to prevent waste and conserve resources.

THE END OF VIRGIN POLYESTER

To stop plastic from polluting our oceans, we'll shift entirely to recycled polyester by 2024.

RAISING THE BAR

Reducing our environmental impact is an essential priority for us. Polyester is the most used material in our products due to its properties for sports performance because it dries quickly and is super lightweight. We can't make the transition overnight, but we are committing to phasing out the use of virgin polyester entirely over the next years.

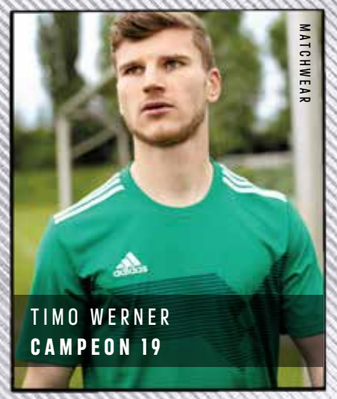

We started in 2012 at the London Olympic Games, where we equipped all volunteers with uniforms made from recycled polyester. In 2019, the majority of our football jerseys and running shoes are made more consciously. But that's not stopping us from doing even better. By 2024, we aim to have all of our shoes and clothing made with recycled polyester. We'll deliver the same style, high-performance and durability while significantly reducing the impact on the environment.
